in Celebration

Bread and Roses
the theme of International Women's Day

For '86, acknowledging Vancouver's 100 years, we join the celebrations and present you with a few roses in recognition of the victories won for women and the victories still to be won.

Our celebration looks to the dedication of our fore sisters who held strong a vision of the future and who gave their lives to the struggles of the day. Struggles not too different from the needs of women today. Medical care, adequate incomes, affordable housing, universal childcare and the list goes on ...

Our celebration also looks at the accomplishments of the decade of women whose theme "equality, development and peace" came to a formal close at FORUM '85, NAIROBI - where thousands upon thousands of women from around the world met and renewed feelings of strength, and self power through the dialogues and exchanges which took place and provided an inspiration for future reunions.

In thanking our sisters, we look to the women around us that are committed to the protection of their rights whether it be to unionize, to protest cuts in social services or to demand the right to choose their own destiny. In doing so, we re-double our determination to the cause of peace and welcome 1986 as the "Year of Peace".

Perhaps our most important accomplishment to celebrate is the reinstatement of Vancouver's Transition House - a true victory for the women of Vancouver.
