

The RED BERETS

Who we are

The Red Berets is a women's singing group which sees music as a powerful tool in the movement for social change. We first got together to sing at International Women's Day in 1981, and since then we've been singing songs of solidarity and struggle at benefits, rallies, demonstrations and picket lines. We are a grassroots singing group dedicated to making music accessible by encouraging audience participation. We've found that singing together generates a strong sense of solidarity.

What we sing

While we sing about a wide diversity of social issues — workers rights, disarmament, anti-intervention, anti-racism, choice on abortion and sexual orientation — our emphasis is on integrating these issues with concerns of the women's movement. We sing both traditional and contemporary songs. When we have time, we like to write our own songs or rewrite the lyrics to other songs to fit a current issue.

If you want us to sing

You can get in touch with us by calling one of the following numbers (evenings and weekends):

555-5555 • 555-5555 • 555-5555

Depending on the type of event, we would like at least 2 weeks notice. If the event has been organized quickly, we can sometimes organize something within a few days. We don't charge a fee, but sometimes accept donations which we use to buy equipment or to pay for other expenses.

As we go marching, marching...
